

Dear Neighbor,

I'm extremely pleased that the new statewide pretrial witness protection program created by legislation I co-sponsored is now in operation. Governor Mike Parson on December 11 signed into law the supplemental spending bill that included $2 million to fund the program, and the Missouri Department of Public Safety already had notified police chiefs and sheriffs in the state to pre-register to participate.

Under the program, the Department may make funds available to Missouri law enforcement agencies to provide for the safety of witnesses to violent crimes and the victims of such crimes if their testimony might subject them to danger, as well as to members of their immediate families. These services may continue as long as danger exists.

The program, titled the Protection Program for Victims/Witnesses of Violent Crime, operates on a reimbursement basis, so law enforcement agencies must pay or obligate funds before being reimbursed. Funds for such services also may come from the Victims of Crime Assistance Program operated by the Missouri Department of Social Services.

To register to participate law enforcement agencies may visit DPS WebGrants. They may contact program manager Connie Berhorst at connie.berhorst@dps.mo.gov or 573-751-2771 for more information.

I am confident that providing protection for witnesses, victims and their families will result in more witnesses and victims testifying so that more of the repeat violent offenders who commit many of our city's most violent crimes can be prosecuted and incarcerated before they can hurt others.

Their help is urgently needed to reduce our city's soaring number of homicides, and they shouldn't have to risk their lives, and the lives of their immediate families, to testify.

As of December 17, there had been 173 homicides so far this year in KCMO, greatly exceeding the previous annual record of homicides of 151 set in 2017 and 2019. This is three more homicides than I reported last week. All three were in south Kansas City, and one was in my legislative district. They brought the total number of homicides in South Patrol this year to 22.

RESOLUTION DISPUTING PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION NOW DEAD

On a straight party-line vote, the House Special Committee on Government Oversight on December 14 voted 6-3 in favor of a non-binding resolution calling on Congress to reject the presidential election results in six states won by former Vice President Joe Biden unless a “full and fair investigation” of those results was completed first.

However, the full Missouri House permanently adjourned its special session December 16 without taking up the measure.

House Resolution 2 introduced by Rep. Justin Hill of St. Charles County cited unsubstantiated claims of voter fraud in Arizona, Georgia, Michigan, Nevada, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin – all states won by Biden.

It sought to put the Missouri House on record as having “no faith in the validity of the results of the 2020 presidential election” reported by those states, called for yet another investigation of the results in those states and asked Congress to refuse to accept the electoral votes from those states unless such an investigation was completed.

Trump attorney Rudy Giuliani, who appeared via videoconference, was the primary witness for the resolution.

The measure died when the chairman of another House committee that also had to approve it prior to House debate said his committee would not meet.

The Government Oversight Committee vote took place on the same day members of the Electoral College met in state capitols across the country to formally elect Biden as president. Biden won 306 electoral votes, while Trump garnered 232, including Missouri's 10 electoral votes. Congress is scheduled to take the largely ministerial action of certifying the Electoral College results on January 6.

No lawsuits challenging the presidential election results in any state have been successful.

STATE REVENUE EXPECTED TO DROP $418.8 MILLION IN FY 2022

State budget officials expect that net state general revenue collections for the upcoming fiscal year will decline by 4.1 percent compared to the anticipated collections for the current fiscal year, dropping by a hefty $418.8 million.

The governor's administration and budget leaders in the Senate and House of Representatives agree to the so-called consensus revenue estimate most years just before the annual state budget process gets underway to ensure all parties are working from the same assumptions regarding how much money the state will have to spend in the coming fiscal year.

The budget process for the 2022 fiscal year begins in January when Gov. Mike Parson presents his proposed spending plan to lawmakers who have through May 7 to pass a final budget. The 2022 fiscal year begins July 1.

STATE APPROVES POLICE ACADEMY FOR LINCOLN UNIVERSITY

State officials on December 15 finalized a license for Lincoln University to operate a law enforcement training academy on its campus.

Lincoln's academy, which is expected to enroll its first recruit class in January, will be the first in the nation operated by a historically Black college or university.

The Missouri Peace Officer Standards and Training (POST) Commission, which oversees the training and licensing of law enforcement officers in the state, voted to recommend the Lincoln training academy for licensure on November 30, and the Missouri Department of Public Safety approved it two weeks later.

In addition, the POST Commission has voted to require future recruits at all Missouri police academies to undergo two hours of training on the history of policing in minority communities, including the role of police in enforcing Jim Crow laws and slavery.

Please scroll down to see the news releases with more information about these actions which I think are both positive steps to improve police-community relations.

Missouri Grants Law Enforcement Basic Training Academy License to Lincoln University

License Will Allow Lincoln to Establish Nation's First Training Academy at a Historically Black College and University

(JEFFERSON CITY, MO) – The state of Missouri has granted a law enforcement basic training center license to Lincoln University, which will allow the establishment of the nation's first law enforcement training academy at a Historically Black College and University (HBCU).

Following a recommendation for approval by the Missouri Peace Officer Standards and Training (POST) Commission on November 30, Governor Mike Parson and Missouri Department of Public Safety Director Sandy Karsten signed the one-year probationary license today during a ceremony at Lincoln.

“At a time when law enforcement agencies are working to attract more diverse officers and create agencies that look more like their communities, Lincoln University presented an ambitious plan for a law enforcement training center that could have far-reaching impacts on recruiting more minorities to policing,” Governor Mike Parson said. “We appreciate all the work the Lincoln University team has put into this unique effort.”

“Lincoln University stands proud as the first HBCU to offer a police academy on its campus,” said Lincoln University President Jerald Jones Woolfolk. “The founding of our University began with a dream that answered the need for educational opportunities for freed African Americans following the Civil War. Today, a new vision is providing this unique opportunity that will create a more diverse field of law enforcement officers.”

“I’ve been impressed by the Lincoln University team’s effort and professionalism as the POST commissioners and I have met with them during the effort to establish the law enforcement basic training center,” Department of Public Safety Director Sandy Karsten said. “Attracting minority recruits to law enforcement is one of the key issues faced by agencies across the nation. The Lincoln University plan has already been garnering attention, and we look forward to issuing peace officer licenses to Lincoln University law enforcement academy graduates in the months ahead.”

The POST Commission granted preliminary approval for Lincoln University’s proposed basic training academy on October 5. Director Karsten and POST program staff conducted site visits on October 16 and November 18, during which reviews were conducted of planned policies and procedures, proposed courses, lesson plans, instructor qualifications, and the academy’s advisory board.

Lincoln University currently offers a Bachelor of Science in criminal justice. The law enforcement training academy will be part of Lincoln's criminal justice program and allow students to pursue Missouri peace officer licenses while earning their academic degrees. It will also accept training academy recruits who are not pursuing academic degrees. Lincoln University says it will strive to recruit a minimum of eight students per academy class and 16 students per academic year after the academy’s first year.

Lincoln University's research shows that of more than 100 HBCUs in the United States, none offer a law enforcement academy program.

The Lincoln University basic training center is the 20th law enforcement academy to be licensed in Missouri. A complete list of the other state licensed basic training centers is available here. Lincoln University plans to enroll its first recruit class in January 2021. Pictures from today's signing ceremony will be available on Flickr.

Peace Officer Standards and Training (POST) Commission votes to require law enforcement recruits be educated in history of policing in minority communities in the U.S.

JEFFERSON CITY – The Peace Officer Standards and Training (POST) Commission today voted to require that Missouri law enforcement academies begin educating all law enforcement recruits in the history of policing in minority communities in the U.S. The two-hour block of instruction would cover policing from the founding of the nation through the present. The measure was unanimously approved.

"I believe providing this training in the history of policing for Missouri officers can help create a better understanding of some of the underlying reasons for conflict and distrust that can exist between law enforcement and minority communities, and can help create better relations going forward," said POST Commissioner and Lincoln University Police Chief Gary Hill. Chief Hill was a member of the POST subcommittee that spent the last two months studying the issue.

"This is an important issue and a good addition to our training curriculum that I believe will benefit all of us," said POST Commissioner and Jefferson County Sheriff Dave Marshak. "The more voices and perspectives that we're exposed to the greater the potential for trust and reconciliation." Sheriff Marshak was also a member of the subcommittee that studied the issue.

The two-hour curriculum is currently being developed and will become part of the mandatory basic training curriculum six months after being shared with Missouri's 20 law enforcement basic training academies. According to state statute, Missouri law enforcement officers must receive at least 600 hours of basic training. The POST commission sets minimum standards for the basic training of peace officers in Missouri.

At its Oct. 5 meeting, the POST commission voted to require annual training in de-escalation techniques and recognizing implicit bias for all Missouri law enforcement officers as part of their required 24-hours of annual continuing education training. At the meeting, the commission also granted preliminary approve of Lincoln University's proposed law enforcement basic training academy. This morning, Governor Mike Parson and Department of Public Safety Director Sandy Karsten signed the license for the Lincoln University academy, the first in the nation to be granted at a Historically Black College and University (HBCU).

Mayor Lucas Calls for Extension of Eviction Moratorium

Evictions tied to hundreds of thousands of COVID-19 cases, research suggests

KANSAS CITY, Mo. – Kansas City Mayor Quinton Lucas today wrote to the Honorable J. Dale Youngs, Presiding Judge of the 16th Judicial Circuit, encouraging him to extend the eviction moratorium in Jackson County as a matter of public health—halting all filings, hearings, writs, enforcement, and garnishments, with narrow exceptions—for at least the first six months of 2021. Mayor Lucas will equally encourage the courts in Cass, Clay, and Platte Counties to extend eviction moratoriums for Kansas Citizens.

In September, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) issued a federal eviction moratorium, which expires at the end of this year.

“The COVID-19 crisis hit Jackson County hard,” wrote Mayor Lucas. “Evictions cause serious health and economic crises, exacerbating harms from the pandemic itself. Homelessness and relocation stress add another barrier for the unemployed and working class as they strive to enter the workforce. Further, landlords file evictions at disproportionate rates in Black and Brown neighborhoods, reinforcing decades of racial inequities.”

“Eviction is already a fundamentally traumatic event, both a cause and a condition of poverty,” continued Mayor Lucas. “The pandemic only adds more anguish. Although I speak for all Kansas Citizens facing poverty, evictions pose even greater risks to Black Kansas Citizens, who are one-third of COVID deaths in the state, but only 11.5 percent of the population. These are among the most important public health and economic interventions our community will ever make. I ask for your consideration.”

“Public health experts and elected officials told us to stay healthy by staying at home, but now court-ordered evictions are forcing us from our homes,” said KC

Tenants Leader Jenay Manley. “It doesn't have to be this way. The courts can and should end evictions to save lives.”

Beginning this Wednesday, December 16, open Mid-Continent Public Library branches* will alter their hours, offering curbside and drive-through services only on the following days and times:

1. Monday–Thursday: 11:00 a.m.–7:00 p.m.
2. Friday and Saturday: 10:00 a.m.–6:00 p.m.
3. Sunday: Closed

The temporary new schedule allows Library staff to work in smaller, alternating shifts, mitigating exposure to one another, and ultimately decreasing the risk of branch closures. Developed in response to growing staffing challenges related to the pandemic, the new hours will remain in effect until further notice.

“We know this schedule is certainly not ideal, but we also know that closing our branches due to outbreaks is even more inconvenient for our customers,” said MCPL Director and CEO Steven V. Potter. “Right now, we are doing everything we can to balance health and safety with customer service, and we hope these hours will help us do that.”

MCPL paused its in-branch services on Monday, November 23, after numerous branches closed due to staff members testing positive for the virus. Wi-Fi continues to be available outside each of the branches, and the Library’s online offerings are available 24/7. Outdoor book drops also remain open 24/7 for customers to return materials. At one point during November 10 MCPL branches were closed due to COVID-19 exposure. Additional staff outbreaks could impact the Library’s ability to continue operating its facilities.

More information about MCPL’s ongoing precautions and procedures can be found at mymcpl.org/COVID.

Spire creates new assistance program for Missouri small businesses impacted by coronavirus pandemic

With 98% of small businesses impacted financially, the natural gas provider offers up to $500 in assistance

ST. LOUIS (Dec. 8, 2020) — Spire is offering a new financial assistance option of up to $500 for active, Missouri small businesses struggling due to the coronavirus pandemic.

Spire will begin accepting applications for the new Small Business Pandemic Relief Program the week of Dec. 14.

The assistance is crucial as a recent study conducted by Spire of small business customers found 98% have been impacted financially by coronavirus. Many of these small businesses are restaurants working through public health precautions and social distancing practices related to the pandemic.

“Small businesses are an important part of our community, making up almost half of Missouri’s private sector jobs and playing a significant role in the state’s economy,” said Scott Carter, president of Spire Missouri. “We want to do our part to help.”

To be eligible for the program, a business must be an active, Missouri customer in the small general services rate class, be a locally owned business or franchise, and complete an online application. If accepted into the program, small businesses can receive $100 per month for up to five months. The program runs through Sept. 30, 2021, or until funds are exhausted.

“Young’s Restaurant & Catering Company, Inc. has been around since 1954,” said Grant Young, owner of the Valley Park, Missouri establishment. “Even as a longstanding family-owned business, we have felt the economic impact of the coronavirus pandemic. Carryout is only 40% of our normal business. We’ve been able to keep everyone employed and our doors open because of support from loyal customers who purchase gift cards and patronize us regularly. As we approach another rough patch, I appreciate Spire stepping up and offering assistance. Every bit helps right now.”

Approved Dec. 2 by the Missouri Public Service Commission, the Small Business Pandemic Relief Program is part of the company’s comprehensive approach to provide relief for customers who are experiencing hardship due to the coronavirus pandemic. In November, the natural gas provider began offering up to $400 in assistance for Missouri residential customers who have been furloughed or experienced job or income loss and have an outstanding balance on their Spire account. Additionally, Spire previously launched one-time credit assistance programs for both Missouri residential and small business customers.

“From the beginning of the pandemic, we’ve been committed to ensuring our community maintains access to affordable, reliable, clean natural gas,” said Carter. “We encourage customers who are struggling to call us. We are here to help.”
