Governor Mike Parson FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

March 17, 2020

What You Need to Know: Missouri's COVID-19 Response Efforts

(JEFFERSON CITY, MO) – As concerns over the new coronavirus (COVID-19) continue to grow across the state and the nation, Governor Mike Parson and his administration are working each day to respond to the virus and protect the health and well-being of Missourians.

Expanding COVID-19 Testing

- The state is currently working with the University of Missouri to expand COVID-19 testing. This should increase testing capabilities by thousands across the state.
- Mercy Hospital recently set up a drive-thru testing site in Chesterfield, and University of Missouri Health Care is also working to implement drive-thru testing in Columbia.
- The Missouri State Public Health Lab will be receiving more tests from the CDC soon, pushing its capacity to 1,600 patient tests.
- Viracor, a private lab in Lee Summit, will have the ability to do over 1,000 tests per day.
- Quest Diagnostic and LabCorp are now testing.
- Washington University in St. Louis is also working to increase testing capacity.

Personal Protective Equipment

- The State Emergency Management Agency is working to procure additional personal protective equipment (PPE) for Missouri state and local response agencies, including law enforcement and the fire service.
- The Department of Public Safety and SEMA will continue to update local response partners as more information becomes available on PPE.

Emergency Declaration and State Regulations

- On March 13, 2020, Governor Parson signed Executive Order 20-02 declaring a state of emergency in Missouri.
- The Executive Order invoked the Missouri State Emergency Operations Plan and will allow more flexibility in utilizing and deploying state resources.
- By declaring a state of emergency, Missouri now has access to an additional $7.2 million for resources such as PPE.
- On March 13, the Missouri Department of Transportation announced an allowance for heavier-than-normal truckloads of supplies and equipment to travel on Missouri highways.
- On March 17, the Missouri Department of Transportation announced an increased weight allowance for trucks to support COVID-19 response and an IRP/IFTA emergency waiver.
- Missouri's State Emergency Operations Center (SEOC) is currently activated at Level 3, partial activation, to coordinate state response efforts.

Closures and Restrictions

- In accordance with CDC recommendations, Governor Parson has strongly urged the cancellation or suspension of public gatherings of 50 individuals or more.
- Governor Parson has also asked that facilities attracting large concentrations of senior citizens strongly consider restrictions and closures, in consultation with health authorities, to protect those most vulnerable to this virus.
- The Missouri Veterans Commission has restricted access to all visitors, volunteers, and vendors until further notice.
- The Missouri Department of Corrections has suspended visitors at state correctional facilities, and the Missouri Department of Mental Health has also restricted visitor access at state mental health facilities.
- Public tours and events in the State Capitol have been shut down to encourage social distancing.
- On March 17, Governor Parson announced that Missouri casinos will be closed through March 30 in order to help prevent the spread of COVID-19.
- As of 2:30 p.m. on March 17, a total of 432 Missouri public school districts/charter schools out of 555 have closed or will soon close.
- Additional restrictive measures will be forthcoming.

Coordination and Communication

- Governor Parson participates in a weekly conference call every Monday with Vice President Mike Pence and other governors around the country to receive federal updates and ask questions.
- Governor Parson also leads a call with emergency management personnel, county commissioners, county sheriffs, and the largest 40 city mayors across the state to provide updates there are over 1,000 invites to this call.
- Governor Parson leads a similar call on Sunday evenings with elected leaders from around the state to discuss some of the primary issues they're hearing about in their communities relating to COVID-19.
- Governor Parson has traveled to several communities around the state to hold COVID-19 with local leadership, including St. Louis, Springfield, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Kirksville, Hannibal, and Columbia. This week, Governor Parson will also travel to Poplar Bluff, Hayti, Cape Girardeau, and Joplin.
- The state has also been in communication with the major utility providers in the state, and they have agreed to forgo disconnects in the event someone cannot pay due to hardship over COVID-19.

Informing the Public

- Each day, Governor Parson and the Missouri Department of Health and Senior Services (DHSS) post an update on social media including the number of positive COVID-19 cases reported in Missouri.
- DHSS has created a website that includes updates on COVID-19 in Missouri as well as other information and resources relating to the virus. All 16 state departments' websites provide a link to this website.
- All 16 state departments also have a consistent social media plan to help educate and update the public.
- A COVID-19 hotline is available through DHSS (877-435-8411) to take and answer questions 24/7.
- To further assist, the state is working on a chatbot that can answer frequently asked questions online and divert volume away from the call centers.

For more information, visit the CDC's website at www.cdc.gov/coronavirus and the DHSS website at www.health.mo.gov/coronavirus.

You may also call the DHSS hotline at 877-435-8411 for questions regarding COVID-19 in Missouri.

Mark A. Sharp Weekly Capitol Report Friday, March.20th, 2020

LEGISLATURE, COURTS, SCHOOLS CLOSE DUE TO VIRUS

As the number of confirmed cases of COVID-19 in Missouri continues to rise, the April municipal elections have been postponed until June, many local public school districts are shutting down for at least a few weeks, state courts are largely closed to in-person proceedings as the state legislature has taken a hiatus.

Gov. Mike Parson issued an executive order on March 13 declaring a state of emergency relating to COVID-19, but at the time expressed caution about overreacting and said decisions such as limiting large gatherings and closing schools should be made at the local level. Within days, many local officials had implemented such steps and most, but not all, of Missouri's 518 public school districts had closed or were planning to.

With the April 7 municipal elections looming, Parson issued another executive order on March 18 postponing them until June 2. There had been concerns about the safety risks to both voters in general and poll workers in particular, since older people tend to be hardest hit by the virus and many poll workers are retirees.

Later on March 18 during one of his now-daily press briefings on the crisis, Parson, a conservative Republican, stressed that it will be up to actions of individual Missourians, not the actions of state government, to minimize the impact of COVID-19.

"It comes down to personal responsibility," Parson said. "We can make all the laws that you want to make, but at the end of the day, this virus will be on the conduct of the Missouri citizens. What are they willing to take upon themselves? What are they willing to make a difference on? Those are what's important."

Parson has said most executive branch offices will remain open to ensure Missourians retain access to necessary state services. The legislative and judicial branches of government, however, will largely be closed.

On March 16, the Missouri Supreme Court issued an order suspending in-person proceedings in all appellate and circuit courts through April 3, with the possibility that the order may be extended as circumstances warrant. Electronic filings and proceedings that don't require physical attendance will continue.

The General Assembly is likewise taking a break, but for how long remains to be seen. While the Senate adjourned on March 12, the House stayed in session for another week before shutting down on March 19. Both chambers currently are scheduled to return March 30, but House Speaker Elijah Haahr, R-Springfield, said in a March 18 news conference it's unlikely that will happen.

HOUSE BLOCKS ATTEMPTS TO BOLSTER COVID-19 FUNDING

While debating legislation to provide supplemental state appropriations for the remainder of the current fiscal year, majority Republicans on March 18 rejected Democratic efforts to increase the spending authority the state might need in the coming months as it responds to the COVID-19 pandemic.

House Bill 2014, which eventually passed on a voted of 147-3-1, contains new spending authority for various aspects of government that wasn't included in the original fiscal year 2020 state operating budget lawmakers enacted last spring. FY 2020 runs through June 30.

Although HB 2014 includes $33 million in spending authority targeted for the state's COVID-19 response, House Democrats argued, based on the needs seen in other states, that amount could prove woefully insufficient. Democrats offered several amendments to increase available resources, including one for another $87 million in spending authority, to better prepare the state for whatever unfolds in the coming months.

While a budget appropriation provides the necessary legal authority to spend money, it doesn't require money to be spent. Nonetheless, Republican lawmakers defeated all attempts to further boost emergency spending, arguing it's too early to tell if additional funding will be needed. State Rep. Kathy Swan, R-Cape Girardeau, dismissed Democratic efforts to better prepare the state as "doomsday discussion."

House Minority Leader Crystal Quade, D-Springfield, expressed frustration that state leaders have been slow to react to the crisis, quick to make excuses for not doing more and prone to defer actions to local officials or the federal government. She noted that all the proposals Democrats offered to bolster Missouri's response are already being implemented in other states.

"Missouri is always the last to do things" Quade said. "This is not the time to wait."

In addition to the FY 2020 supplemental spending bill, the House had been expected to pass its version of the $30.9 billion state operating budget for the 2021 fiscal year, which begins July 1. In fact, the House Budget Committee had met earlier in the week during a marathon session to ready the FY 2021 budget bills for debate by the full House.

Less than a day before that debate was to begin, however, Republican leaders opted to delay action until the legislature reconvenes, which isn't expected until at least early April. The delay was largely due to the expectation that revenue collections will fall well short of previous estimates since much of the state's economy is shutting down as people isolate themselves. As a result, significant budget cuts likely will be needed.

Once the budget bills clear the House, the Senate will craft its own version of the measures. Lawmakers face a May 8 constitutional deadline for finishing the budget.
